Marine For Life

"Marine For Life will help our Marine Corps family stay better connected with the nearly 27,000 Marines who leave active duty each year".

"The Marine For Life program reinforces the value of honorable service and our commitment to our ethos "Once a Marine, Always a Marine."

"Marine For Life is about Marines helping Marines . . . for life."

"We will all spend more time as Marines out of uniform than we will spend in uniform. Marine For Life embraces this reality, to the benefit of all Marines."

Marines get help moving to the Triangle
Updated: 3/10/2004 7:02 AM
By: Heather Moore & Web Staff
Dunbar has a job with the city of Durham.
Marines leaving active duty and coming to the Triangle are getting some extra help from the corps. It's called the Marine For Life Program. A local reservist helps Marines leaving active duty find a home in the Triangle, a civilian job and veteran benefits.
27,000 men and women like Sergeant Ronald Dunbar are leaving active duty each year and for many, the transition back to being a civilian is a challenge.
"A lot of Marines, this might be their first time purchasing a home or renting outside of base-style housing so I help with that," USMC reserve Major Taylor Keeney said.
The Marine For Life Program also helps Marines find places to work when they leave active duty.
"I decided I wanted to go into the field I did in the Marine Corps, which was supply inventory control," Dunbar said.
